

Do distribution boxes need to be branded

Overview

A custom-branded distribution box, with your company colors, logo, or project name, reinforces brand consistency. It's a subtle yet powerful way to show stakeholders that your attention to detail extends to every corner of the project. While electrical labelling is most importantly about safety, it should also be convenient, professional and time-saving, leaving a lasting impression with your customers. In fact, it is so important that an entire section of the Requirements for Electrical Installations, IET. Our current boxes need reordering, will these be useless after the move to the new address?

2. Is there a grace period after a company moves to the requirement that consumer goods must be labeled with the name and place of business of the manufacturer, packer, or distributor?

The Fair Packaging and. Finally, consider whether you need customised labels that include your company logo, branding, or specific product information. Customised labels can help improve brand recognition and make it easier for employees to identify specific products or materials. We match label size and placement to real corrugate specs—from 32 ECT standards like 8" x 6" x 4" to heavier 200# Mullen cartons—so your barcode scans fast and.
